

ISM 672: Application Design and Programming

Assignment # 1

The DjangoTraders app was extended to support searching and sorting customer and product information, full detail views for both, and improved CSS/UI-UX, built on top of Django models, views, templates, and URL routing, and styled with Bootstrap 5.

Requirement 1: Search and Sort Customer Information:

The customer page can be sorted by clicking any column header (Company Name, Contact Name, Title, City, or Country). The search form has five fields: Company Name and Contact Name are free-text, substring searches; City, Title, and Country are exact-match dropdowns built from every distinct value on record. All three of those fields also show as their own column in the results table. A search with no matches shows a message instead of an empty table.

Requirement 2: Search and Sort Product Information:

The products page can be sorted by clicking any column header (Product Name, Supplier, Unit Price, Units In Stock, or Discontinued). The search form filters by Product Name (free text), Category and Supplier (both dropdowns), and a “Show all products” checkbox that includes discontinued products when checked (hidden by default). A product low on stock (at or below its own reorder level) is flagged with a Low Stock badge. A search with no matches shows a message instead of an empty table.

Requirement 3: Detail View(s):

Clicking a customer opens Customer Detail, showing their contact info, an Order Summary (total quantity and revenue across every order), and a table of every order they've placed. Clicking a product opens Product Detail, showing its own info, its supplier's company name and contact info, and a Sales Summary (units sold and total revenue), laid out as three cards side by side, followed by a table of every order the product has appeared on — each row showing which customer bought it. From either page, clicking an Order # opens Order Detail on its own page, showing the customer, the assigned employee and shipper, the order timeline, the shipping address, and every line item on that order.

Extra Credit:

Order Detail shows who the order is assigned to the employee's name and the shipper's company name (visible in the Assigned To card in the Order Detail screenshots above), falling back to “Not yet assigned” for either one if it isn't on record. Product Detail also lists other products from the same supplier, with a checkbox to include discontinued items (hidden by default, the same pattern as the product search's own “Show all products” checkbox).
